

Draft resolution

AAP staff express their disgust at the handling of the current redundancy process.

Members of staff have found the whole process extremely distressing. Morale is at an all-time low, further exacerbated by the lack of transparency in the process.

If management feel the need to reduce staff numbers, then a planned process through natural attrition is preferable to forced redundancy.

We call on the company to increase the overall redundancy package out of respect for the years of service staff have served.

In notifying about the redundancies, we were distressed to see what was essentially a press release from the company about the redundancy was carried as a news piece on the wire. It should have been identified as a company statement.